LEARN THE TRICKS OF SUCCESSFUL URBAN GARDENING AT DENNIS' 7 DEES EDIBLE LANDSCAPES FAIR MARCH 6

PORTLAND, OREGON (February 22, 2010) – Ever wonder how to grow a bountiful garden in an urban yard? Grow food in containers? Grow fruit trees? Grow organically? Get greater plant yields in limited space?

Here's your chance to kick off the gardening season by learning this and much more at the first annual Dennis' 7 Dees Edible Landscapes Fair on Saturday, March 6. The event takes place from 10 a.m. – 5 p.m. at Dennis' 7 Dees Eastside Garden Center, 6025 SE Powell Blvd.

For both new and experienced gardeners, the Edible Landscapes Fair will focus on creating edible and sustainable gardens in the urban landscape. Participants will learn how to maximize yields in small spaces, grow food plants in containers, build a multi-use garden with year round production and choose native and other edibles that provide the most "bang for the buck(et)."

The Edible Landscapes Fair features special high-interest presentations by representatives of the Portland Permaculture Guild, One Green World growers, METRO Portland and the Portland Rose Society along with information tables, vendors and activities for children. Visit our website for a full schedule of workshops and events.

As part of the Edible Landscapes Fair, Dennis' 7 Dees will be offer a preview of the new-for-2010 "Pink Lemonade" blueberry plant, as well as discounts on fresh, seasonal bare-root fruit trees, berry bushes, rhubarb, asparagus and more for the edible landscape.

For more information about the event, contact Mulysa Melco at 503-777-1421 or visit www.dennis7dees.com.
